ATLANTA (MyFOX Atlanta) -- Two Atlanta safety groups are calling the 17th Street Bridge a danger to both pedestrians and cyclists.

One cyclist was recently injured when he was hit by a car -- now these groups are asking the state for immediate repairs.

FOX 5's Doug Evans reports.

Safety groups say the bike, pedestrian crossing over the 17th Street bridge is a danger for users.

Doug Evans:

“The DOT says because of PEDS it will put up warning signs for motorists to stop for pedestrians in the crosswalk there. We’ve also learned that the crosswalk [signals] are malfunctioning...”
